DEPARTMENT OF LIBRARY AND INFORMATION SCIENCE
A. N. College, Patna
Programme Specific Outcomes (PSO)

PSO1:

To demonstrate knowledge of the basic concepts, principles, theories and laws related with the broad field of Library and Information Science and its sub-fields such as types of libraries and their functions; library classification and cataloguing; information sources and services; library management; applications of computer technology in libraries; evolution of library movement; library legislation; library and information science education and research; user studies; and library profession.

PSO2:

To demonstrate understanding of rationality and procedures of (i) selection, acquisition, classification, cataloguing and physical processing of documents using standards; (ii) providing library and information services and managing library routine housekeeping activities manually and through library management software and Information and communication technologies;(iii) maintaining library collection ; (iv) identifying needs and behaviour of users; and (v) educating users.

PSO3:

To apply skills in handling all kinds of information environment both traditional and automated for carrying out professional activities such as processing and circulation of documents; reference and information services; automated libraries; Internet and database searching.

PSO4:

To manipulate and excel in the changing information landscape through the rigorous hands-on practice of basics and applications of ICT in library operations.

PSO5:

Learn to exhibit knowledge, understanding and skills that offer job opportunities as librarians in different types of libraries: academic, public, special, research, government and private and commercial information centres.

PSO6:

To show professional attitude through commitment in providing every user his/her information ensuring right information at right time and right place with the objective to maximize user satisfaction through effective library services.

PSO7:

To illustrate core values in discharging social responsibility of librarians towards nation building and to display ethical integrity dealing with stakeholders in information use in relation to intellectual property rights.